For thirty years Brown's Bronchial Troches have been recommended by physicians, and always give perfect satisfaction. One evening this week a meeting was held there, participated in by many prominent business men, capitalists and real estate owners, at which it was decided to put forth efforts and hold out inducements of a valuable character to manufacturing establishments, to secure their location there. It was the sense of the box everywhere. meeting that no city could hold its own in "A Laby had the flesh caten off her arm by scrofula, Could see the sinews working. One speaker, who had given the subject special attention, claimed that the tangible benefits and profits to a community from capital invested in manufacturing industries, were ten and a half times those accruing from the same capital invested in commercial business. It seems that the Maryland laws have heretofore discriminated against manufacturers on a large scale. It is now proposed to exempt all such enterprises from taxation for a large scale. It is now proposed to exempt subject special attention, claimed that the Mrs. Wallace, Buffalo, N. SEVERAL of our exchanges are advocating a modification of the public school system of the country by which the schools will be rendered technical. The suggestion now going the rounds came originally, we be-Drugsiss, Wheeling, W. Va. from a New England educajournal, but it has been quite generally taken up by other papers, and recently a city contemporary localized the idea, going somewhat into par-CARRUNKLES, Felons, Boils, Sores of long principal difficulty of the public schools rnow is exactly that they are too technical. Their technicality lies, however, in the direction of professional callings. The schools should not be for the education of lawyers or physicans or merchants or lawyers or physicans or merchants or blacksmiths, but of the people, and their scope should embrace only what properly pertains to a rudimentary education intended to be supplemented by special study or training for each particular calling. Much that is taught in our grammar schools is worthless to a large portion of the pupils in after life. Their o'clock r. M., from his late residence, 847 Main teachings cannot be too practical, but they should not be in any degree technical, for technical teaching in any art or calling would be so much waste of time, except to the few who might afterward follow that calling, and must at any rate be so superficial as to be of no benefit even to this few. Nothing should be taught that is not of use to all classes of population. Even this limitation would leave a much vaster scope of learning than could be acquired in the time usually spent in the comm schools. The boy or girl who has learned to read intelligently, to spell correctly, to write neatly and legibly, to make ordinary calculations in numbers rapidly and reliably, to speak the vernacular properly, and to behave with decency and propriety on the street, in business and social circles and at home, is a rare product of the pub-lic schools of our day; and yet the accom-plishment of these ends should be the dearest ambition and the grandest triumph of our system of public education.
